

Primary

“Bell, Alexander Graham, et al. Notebook by Alexander Graham Bell”, from to September 30, 1876. from to September 30, 1876, 1876. Manuscript/Mixed Material. Retrieved from the Library of Congress, <www.loc.gov/item/magbell.25300102/>. Accessed 18 January 2024

This photograph is a primary source that showed Bell’s notebook sketches. It can be found on the importance section of the website, and it helped the researcher get a better understanding of Bell’s first ideas of the telephone.

“Alexander Graham Bell at age 18”. [, Printed Later] Photograph. Retrieved from the Library of Congress, <www.loc.gov/item/96501719/>. Accessed 17 January 2024

The photograph is a primary source that showed Alexander Graham Bell as a young adult. It can be found on the introduction section of the website, and helped the researcher get a better understanding of what Bell looked like at 18.

“Alexander Graham Bell's design sketch of the telephone.” 1876. Manuscript/Mixed Material. Retrieved from the Library of Congress, <www.loc.gov/item/mcc.004/>. Accessed 17 January 2024.

This photograph is a primary source that showed Alexander Graham Bell’s sketch on his ideas of the telephone. It can be found on the photo for the turning point section of the website, and helped the researcher get an idea of Bell’s first ideas of the telephone.

Bell, Alexander Graham. Improvement in Telegraphy. Patent no. 174,465, 7 Mar. 1876, <http://www2.iath.virginia.edu/albell/bpat.1.html>. Accessed 17 January 2024.

This patent is a primary source that provided information on Alexander Graham Bell’s improvements on the telegraphy. It can be found in the thesis and on the influence pages of the website, and in the introduction of the Process Paper. This source helped the researcher understand Bell’s process on how he made the telephone.

Peirce, Benjamin, et al. Letter from Benjamin Peirce to Alexander Graham Bell. 1877. Manuscript/Mixed Material. Retrieved from the Library of Congress, <www.loc.gov/item/magbell.12600201/>. Accessed 17 January 2024.

This letter from one of his previous co-workers is a primary source that provided information on Alexander Bell's accomplishments with the telephone and what other people thought of his works. It is used on the impact page of the website, and helped the researcher to know that people did thank Bell for his works.

Secondary

“A. G. Bell” ca. 1910. Biography.com

<https://www.biography.com/inventors/alexander-graham-bell> Accessed 17 January 2024.

This website is a secondary source that provided a photograph of Alexander Graham Bell and many facts. It is used for the photograph in the thesis section of the website, and helped the researcher get a photograph of Alexander Graham Bell in 1910

“Bell making a phone call from New York” 1892. History.com

<https://www.history.com/topics/inventions/alexander-graham-bell> Accessed 17 January 2024.

This website is a secondary source that provided a photograph of Alexander Graham Bell Making a phone call from New York. It is used for the home page of the website, and helped the researcher see Bell make a real phone call.

History.com editors “Alexander Graham Bell: Telephone & Inventions.” HISTORY, 9 Nov. 2009, <https://www.history.com/topics/inventions/alexander-graham-bell#sources>. Accessed 26 January 2024.

This website is a secondary source that provided facts about Alexander Bell’s young life and the invention of the telephone. It is used in the thesis, introduction, turning point, impact, influence, and timeline sections of the website, and helped the researcher understand more about Bell’s life and background.

Bell’s voice over the first telephone 2013.

<https://www.youtube.com/watch?reload=9&v=4lJ6Pwb15JY> Accessed 17 January 2024.

This video is a secondary source that provided a recording of Alexander Graham Bell talking across the first telephone. It is used for the video in the influence section of the website, and helped the researcher hear Bell’s voice over the first telephone line.

“Childhood photography of Bell” ca 1885.

<https://www.timetoast.com/timelines/events-during-alexander-graham-bell-s-lifetime>
Accessed 17 January 2024.

This website is a secondary source that provided information and a timeline on Alexander Graham Bell’s life. It is used for the photograph in the impact section of the website, and helped the researcher see a photo of Bell at a young age.

Forgeard, Valerie. “How the Telephone Changed the World.” Brilliantio, 8 Feb. 2022, <https://brilliantio.com/how-did-the-telephone-change-the-world/>. Accessed 17 January 2024.

This website is a secondary source that provided information on how the telephone impacted the world. It is used in the thesis, introduction, impact, influence, and importance sections of the website, and helps the researcher understand how it impacted the world.