

Annotated Bibliography

Primary Sources

Shackleton, Ernest. South. Macmillan, 1962.

Reading this through helped me get a general idea of what happened throughout the expedition from Shackleton's eyes. This was the first book that I read to get an overview of my topic.

Worsely, Frank. Endurance: An Epic of Polar Adventure. Jonathan Cape and Harrison Smith Inc., 1931.

This book was another perspective, this time from the ship's captain. It had images from Hurley's (the ship's photographer) camera.

Worsley, Frank Arthur. Shackleton's Boat Journey. Norton & Company, Inc., 1933.

This book added more smaller facts to the general overarching story that I'd gotten the gist of.

"A Group Photo of the Endurance's Crew." Scott Polar Research Institute,

Secondary Sources

Bertozzi, Nick. Shackleton: Antarctic Odyssey.

This was an easy-to-read comic that gave me a clearer picture of my topic.

McKernan, Victoria. Shackleton's Stowaway. Laurel Leaf, 2005.

This was an interesting book with a fictional perspective of the stowaway on the ship.

While the story was fictional, it was based on reality, and the stowaway did, in fact, exist.

Shackleton, Jonathan and John MacKenna. Shackleton: An Irishman in Antarctica. The Lilliput

Press, 2002.

This book gave me perspective on Shackleton's life before the Endurance mission, even before he became famous as a polar explorer.
