

Annotated Bibliography

Primary:

Babylon Tours. The Berlin Wall Memorial. 2020,
<https://babylontours.com/exploring-berlin-wall-memorial/>. Accessed 9 Jan. 2024.

This image is a primary source that helped the maker have a visual aid of the Berlin Wall Memorial. It is used in the Influence page of the website.

McCartney, Robert J. "East Germany Opens Berlin Wall and Borders, Allowing Citizens to Travel Freely to the West." The Washington Post, 10 Nov. 1989, <https://www.washingtonpost.com/archive/politics/1989/11/10/east-germany-opens-berlin-wall-and-borders-allowing-citizens-to-travel-freely-to-the-west/98a8e433-efba-44a9-bd42-0c6781375d66/>. Accessed 10 Oct. 2023.

This newspaper article is a primary source that helped the writer understand what was the social and political state at the time of the event. The maker used it in the first paragraph of the process paper, and in the thesis and introduction and background pages of the website.

Schabowski, Gunter. "Günter Schabowski's Press Conference in the GDR International Press Center 6:53 - 7:01 p.m." Wilson Center Digital Archive, 9 Nov. 1989, <https://digitalarchive.wilsoncenter.org/document/gunter-schabowskis-press-conference-gdr-international-press-center-653-701-pm>. Accessed 26 Jan. 2024.

This press conference is a primary source that helped the writer understand what happened prior to the event. It can be found in the first paragraph of the process paper and the Introduction and Background page of the website.

Shutterstock. East and West German People Celebrate the End of Cold War on Top of the Berlin Wall, 10 November 1989. 10 Nov. 1989, <https://www.theguardian.com/books/2019/nov/09/30-years-after-fall-berlin-wall>.
Accessed 14 Dec. 2023.

This image is a primary source that gave the maker a visual aid of what the German people celebrated the fall of the Berlin Wall. This image is used in the Thesis page of the website.

The Washington Post. People Celebrating the Fall of the Berlin Wall. Nov. 1989, <https://www.pewresearch.org/short-reads/2014/11/03/berlin-walls-fall-marked-the-end-of-the-cold-war-for-the-american-public/>. Accessed 26 Jan. 2024.

The image is a primary source that gave the reader a visual aid of what the German people did celebrate the fall of the Berlin Wall. This image can be found in the Home page of the website.

TV, No Comment. "The Fall of the Berlin Wall in 1989." YouTube, Video, 10 Nov. 1989, <https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=zmRPP2WXX0U>. Accessed 26 Jan. 2024.

The video is a primary source that helped the maker understand what the German people did to bring down the Berlin Wall. This video can be found in the Introduction and Background page of the website.

Secondary:

McBride, James. "After the Berlin Wall: Europe's Struggle to Overcome Its Divisions." Council on Foreign Relations, 23 Oct. 2019, <https://www.cfr.org/article/after-berlin-wall-europes-struggle-overcome-its-divisions>. Accessed 11 Oct. 2023.

This article is a secondary source that helped the writer understand the events after the event happened. The maker used this website in the first paragraph in the process paper, and in every page of the website except the home, introduction and background, and timeline pages.

Moorhouse, Dan. The USSR Ship Sinking and Splitting into Different Republics. . 2018, <https://schoolshistory.org.uk/topics/european-history/russia-soviet-union/failure-of-reform-and-the-decline-of-the-communist-state/>. Accessed 9 Jan. 2024.

This political cartoon is a secondary source that gave the maker a illustration of the fall of the Soviet Union. This cartoon can be found on the Impact page of the website.

Peteri. Map of Berlin Wall (1961-1989) in Cold War. 2024, <https://stock.adobe.com/images/map-of-berlin-wall-1961-1989-in-cold-war/34396937>.
Accessed 3 Apr. 2024.

The image is a secondary source that helped the maker understand where the Berlin wall was in the Cold War. The maker used this image in the Information/Background page of the website.

“The Berlin Wall Memorial.” Berlin Wall Foundation,
<https://www.stiftung-berliner-mauer.de/en/berlin-wall-memorial/historical-site/memorial>.
Accessed 12 Oct. 2023.

This article is a secondary source that helped the writer understand the history of the Berlin Wall Memorial. The maker used this website in the first paragraph of the process paper and the impact and influence pages of the website.

The Boston Globe. The United States and the Soviet Union Shaking Hands to End the Cold War. 2015, <https://www.bostonglobe.com/arts/books/2015/11/13/book-review-the-end-cold-war-robe-rt-service/qqGXKUiP6ia6wko2mjusKN/story.html>. Accessed 24 Jan. 2024.

This illustration is a secondary source that gave the maker a visual representation of the United States and the Soviet Union coming to an agreement to end the Cold War. This illustration can be found in the Importance section of the website.